

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

BRIGHT LEGACY

One half the income from this Legacy, which was received in 1880 under the will of

of Waltham, Massachusetts, is to be expended for books for the College Library. The other half of the income is devoted to scholarships in Harvard University for the benefit of descendants of who died at Watertown, Massachusetts, in 1666. In the absence of such descendants, other persons are eligible to the scholarships. The will requires that this announcement shall be made in every book added to the Library under its provisions.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
COURIER PRINTING CO.
1901.

Dedicated to the memory of Henry Bond, M. D., only son of Henry Bond and Hannah (Stearns) Bond, to whom we are all indebted for the first genealogy of the Stearns family published in 1855, under the title of "Genealogies of the Families and Descendants of the early Settlers of Watertown, Massachusetts."

Introduction.

In the summer of 1892 a few persons in Syracuse, N. Y., and vicinity formed a New York State Association of the Stearns families, with E. C. Stearns, President, Edson J. Stearns, Vice President, and Mrs. Avis (Stearns) Van Wagen, Secretary and Treasurer. It was the intention of the association to solicit additional memberships until a sufficient number should join them from all parts of North America and ultimately become a National Organization, with the purpose of taking that part of "Bond's Genealogies" pertaining to the Stearns families, as a basis for a new work, and bringing the records of all who would co-operate in the movement down to the present time. After several months of earnest effort throughout the state so little interest was aroused in the subject, that the Association finally abandoned its object. The undersigned then took upon herself the arduous task. After the work was well progressed, and accumulating in large proportions the services of a competent genealogist was secured in the person of Mrs. M. E. Abbott. In the early stages of the work we received the manuscript compiled by Irving A. Stearns, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., which was of great assistance in arranging the descendants of "my kinsman, Charles Sternes." We are also indebted for much information to Hazen's Hist. of Billerica, Brown's Hist. of Bedford, Stearns' Hists. of Rindge and Ashburnham, Dedham Records, Family Memorial, by George Chapin Stearns, Barrus' Hist. of Goshen, Mass., Andrews' Family Genealogy, together with town records and family histories without number. Mr. Wm. H. Manning, of Worcester, and Mrs. Amelia D. Stearns, of Boston, Mass., have given much individual assistance, and there are scores of others to whom our thanks are due.

We shall always remember with pleasure and gratitude the interest and encouragement afforded us by our townsman Major Albert Stearns, No. 4261, who has written the article on Heraldry and compiled the statistics for both volumes. We are also indebted to our publisher, Mr. F. H. Johnson of Syracuse, N. Y., and J. Manz Engraving Co. of Chicago, Ill., and Bartlett & Co. of New York, for the very able, prompt and courteous manner in which they have executed our orders and to all who have seconded our efforts in the slightest degree, we wish here to express our thanks and appreciation.

Very truly,

(Mrs.) AVIS (STEARNS) VAN WAGENEN.

Armory or Heraldry.

The fact that our fathers brought from England the family Coat of Arms,—that it was borne there three centuries ago, by a Sterne, who was the third citizen in the British Peerage, next to royal blood,—that a titled Stern was Honorary Colonel of a Regiment in England within the past ten years, (1891),—that it was well known in many counties there,—that patriotic and honored members of our family used it here, after the Revolutionary War (see Pitcher, opp P. 79), also, that several different “charges” appear to have been used in this country by the Stearns family, all resting upon the same base, i. e., the Golden Shield and the Three Crosses; all these things make it proper that something should be here said upon the above named subject, even though it be a very brief and rambling recapitulation of interesting published matter, which would fill many volumes as large as the family Bible.

It is quite natural our ancestors should suppose the Science of Armory or Heraldry would be practiced in the new country, for it was ancient, useful and noble. It may have been abused, notably in the times of Charles II. (1649-85), when titles could be bought, but so have all things, even the good offices of the church.

Heraldry in England was a purely military and feudal institution, dating from about 950 A. D. in the tournaments of Germany and imported by the Norman invaders. William the Conqueror (1035-97) appointed some seven hundred of his followers to be Barons, dividing England up, making them Tenants-in-Chief from the Crown; none of these families now remain in the land.

The armorial shield, like the signet ring, was used in the place of a signature, by many who could not write their names. At the time of signing the great Magna Charta (1215), twenty-three English Barons affixed their marks, a cross; it was even sealed by King John without his signature. The Sign of the Cross is often found upon shields and seals; over three hundred and eighty different forms of crosses are recorded. It was usually employed in the execution of early deeds, to render the compact binding, and the custom of persons who are unable to write, still signing with a cross, is a survival of this practice. The Cross is the most honorable charge to be found in Heraldry, and its bearing is the express badge of a Christian; it was borne by the Crusaders and from this fact they received their name.

Coats of Arms usually consist of a shield and helmet, with "ordinaries," and it may have "charges" of things animate or inanimate, real or mythical, each in varied forms, (like the Cross referred to above), illustrated by one or more "Tinctures," (of which there are fifteen, the two precious metals, five colors and eight furs) affording opportunity for much art and brilliancy in make-up of armory, when thousands of pounds were expended upon a single outfit. They were often adorned by "supporters" 'on the sides,—see lion and the unicorn of England; sundry things might be shown, forming a "crest" above the shield, like the Starling of our first Isaac Stearns. Mottoes were shown; flowers, which speak such varied languages were freely used; the whole often encircled with "mantles" or lines of beauty. All the above had a distinct and well understood meaning in the Language of Heraldry, which even the illiterate gentlemen had to learn by heart. The charges upon the shield originally represented the great deeds done upon the field of battle.

Heraldic devices were depicted upon flags, the rank of commander determining the size and shape of each. Some pennons had points like a swallow's tail, and when the owner did some especial act of gallantry, his Sovereign might promote him on the field of battle by tearing off these points.

The sails of the early men of war, are constantly represented with armorial blazonry.

Coats of Arms were embroidered upon altar cloths in Boston, Mass., during the sixteenth century.

Heraldic rebuses were sometimes formed, by adding to the coat of arms, some object whose name sounded like the whole or a part of the family name. In parts of England the "Starling" was called a "Sterne;" this may have caused its use by a branch of our family there.

The arms of the Duke de Medici are used in this country in front of every pawn shop, the three balls.

The Sterne (or Stearns) coat of arms is known to have been borne by families in the following named counties of England: Berks, Buckingham, Cambridge, Hertford, Lancaster, Norfolk, Nottingham, Suffolk, Sussex and York, comprising nearly one-third of that country.

During the reign of Richard III. (1483-85) Heraldry was placed under specific control, by the incorporation of a college, which allowed no arms to be used without authority:

"Arms of Descent" or Paternal Arms, belong to and distinguish some particular family, and it was unlawful for any other family to assume them; the inheritance of such in the third generation, constituted a Gentleman in right of blood; in the fourth, a Gentleman of Ancestry, or a complete nobility, "Begun in the sire, growing in the son and complete in the grandson," qualifying the owner to be received at the Court of his own and other Sovereign Princes.

Coats of Arms could be willed away, given or sold, like chattel property, by undisputed owners. Often combats of Arms were resorted to for the settlement of claims to certain armorial designs. A man might assume and bear arms of a conquered enemy.

Names were often changed, upon the bestowal of a Title, the family name of the Wandsworth Barony being Stern.

Armorial Seals were believed to have been in England as early as 1030. Arms have been assigned to our Saviour; an escutcheon was still extant in 1892, in the Cathedral at Mayence, showing twenty quarterings, said to have been so placed, in order that our Lord might take highest rank as "a gentleman;" a custom prevailing in "Mayence the Golden," that those only, who bore sixteen or more quarterings could aspire to this nobility. The first authentic seal, of which an impression is still in existence, is that of Edward the Conqueror (1042-66). Henry I. hung an armorial shield upon the breast of Geoffrey of Anjou in 1122, upon his marriage to that King's daughter; but enthusiasts claim that it existed at a much earlier date, and would fain show it by Holy Writ in 1490 B. C., referring to Numbers II., 2, which orders "Every man of the Children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house, far off about the tabernacle of the congregation, shall they pitch;" they also refer to Psalms XX., 5; LX., 4, and Isaiah XIII., 2. Sophocles, Herodotus, Virgil and other ancient writers give minute descriptions of the devices represented on the shields of their heroes, but they may not be strictly "Heraldic charges."

This Science was useful in warlike times to distinguish, during the dust and confusion of battle, the different Knights who led and fought, encased in steel; the coat of arms being shown upon the shield, the breast and back; also upon the horse's blanket, both before and behind the saddle. The neglect to wear arms sometimes proved fatal; the last De Clare owed his death on the field of Bannockburn (1314) to this cause, being captured by the Scots; his great value as a prisoner would have saved him for ransom. A typical incident showing the Chivalry of those days, (which was a twin brother of Heraldry), happened upon this field, the day before the battle. King Robert the Bruce, with thirty thousand Scots opposed the advance of a hundred thousand English troops, who sought to raise the siege of Stirling Castle near by, and to conquer Scotland. A river, spanned by a single bridge, divided the two armies; an English Knight, named De Bohun, thinking to win augmentations to his escutcheon, being armed with the heavy spear and splendidly mounted, rode out in full view of the two armies and challenged King Bruce to single combat. Bruce, mounted upon a pony and armed only with a battle axe, crossed the bridge; each advanced to the encounter, when near together the Scot turned to the left, dodging the spear and drove his axe through the helmet and skull of his foe-man. The battle on the following day ended with a victory for the Scottish King; doubtless this incident helped him greatly, for in those days, good or ill omens had great influence over soldiery, and the smallness of his army justified an exposure which, at this day, would be called insanity. Heraldry has often served to determine the age and builder of ancient structures; the identity of portraits, titles to real-estate and especially in preserving records of family relationships.

It was noble, in that it enforced as high a degree of rectitude and honor as the age would permit; it encouraged loyalty to the crown; mercy to prisoners; chivalry to the fair sex; bravery and skill at arms. Only the Noble were entitled to wear arms and up to the fifteenth century, even such must have "won their spurs" or charges upon the field, all others were forbidden by law. In the times of Peter the Hermit (1050-1115) any one who slew an infidel was declared "noble" and could wear arms.

Additions to coats of arms were carried to great extremes, being at times made to represent forty to fifty different things, by quarterings, crests, &c., such as noble descent, intermarriage of noble families, marriage to an heiress, (then her arms must be borne), skill in battle, rank of a son, or "cadency;" a fourth son could take the "martlett," a small bird, shown without feet, to indicate that a younger son had little land to stand upon, hence, must support himself by his wings, i. e., his sword or his brain, and the profession of arms or the church received and provided for him, seemingly a choice between slaughtering soldiers or saving souls.

The nobleman was obliged by public opinion to wear arms; if he committed any act unworthy of knighthood, portions of his escutcheon were "voided," this being done for such acts as revoking his challenge, deserting the banner of, or lying to his Sovereign, cowardice, vainly boasting of martial achievements, effeminacy, drunkenness or licentious conduct, killing a prisoner with his own hands, when not justified by self defense, acting as a traitor to his king and country; for this last crime, the most disgraceful of all, the escutcheon was condemned to be borne reversed; all these things applied, not only to the actual culprit, but to his whole family, until restored by royal favor.

When "villainous saltpeter" came into use, the closed helmets were laid aside, and armorial bearings fell into disuse in time of war, but continued to be emblems of rank and a mark of gentle blood; in later years, the legal restrictions in England have been replaced by custom, gentlemanly usages and genealogies.

This Science has been criticised, in that it encourages vanity, but it has been well said, "He who careth not whence he cometh, careth little whither he goeth." Family pride will do much to restrain the young man from disgraceful deeds; the aegis of a good mother's love will follow him around the world, an ever present shield, and when all the mothers for many generations, have been good, the armor is doubly secure. Children are the mother's diadem; the more useful the child the brighter the jewels shine above her brow, because they prove greater care and skill on the part of the lapidary in the cutting and polishing; hence, the usefulness of genealogies like this, to register these things, and many sparkling brilliants may be found recorded in this volume. However, we will not regret that Heraldry has practically ceased in these United States, except on seals used by the Country, States, Corporations, &c. So long as each of our large family continues useful and honorable, the "Screaming Eagle," shown upon the arms of our country, may well represent now, that exuberance of spirit, due to the magnitude of the tasks accomplished and the good results likely to follow, as it did to our brave fathers, a century ago.

From the foregoing, it may be seen that family arms may be modified in various ways, for different branches of the family, and these may again be changed by younger branches. Regarding the coat of arms of the Sterne or Stearns family in England and in this country, the oldest that we now have knowledge of, (which we will call No. 1), is that of the Archbishop of York, (1664-83), whose family shield was or, a chev. betw. three crosses flory sa. crest a cock starling ppr. It had ornamental mantling and a ribbon below, without motto. This distinguished man, by right of his clerical position, took rank ahead of all others in the peerage, except the reigning family, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Lord High Chancellor. We know this to have been an old English family and the arms were at that time doubtless many generations old.

Other branches of the family in England bore three crosses of a different form; some the "patonce," others "crosslets" or "pattee." Records also show that the crests varied, some having a falcon, others a griffin or a dove. Authorities differ even about the arms of the Archbishop, but the above seems to be the most authentic.

The College of Heraldry, in London, have recently sent us a copy in colors of "the Arms borne by Archbishop Sterne," or, a chev. betw. three crosses flory sa., without other augmentations.

Bond's genealogy of our family shows a shield like No. 1, which "belonged to the occupants of the old Stearns Homestead in Watertown," Mass., doubtless brought to this country by Isaac Stearns in 1630, but it also bears the helmet, and cock starling for a crest, with ornamental mantling and ribbon without motto below.

No. 2, Mr. Charles R. Stearns of Creighton, Neb., sends sketch of a shield now in his family, borne by "Richard Sterne, Esq., son and heir of the most reverend father in God, Richard Sterne, Lord Archbishop of York." It is the same as No. 1, except it has for a crest a wreath supporting a dove bearing an olive branch, and on the shield, under lower cross, the motto, Sustinet—to Sustain.

Mr. Robert E. C. Stearns of Los Angeles, Cal., sends copy of one similar to No. 2.

No. 3, The author, Laurence Sterne (1713-68), a great-grandson of the Archbishop, has his coat of arms as a frontispiece to Tristram Shandy and other books; it is or, a chev. betw. three crosses patonce, crest a wreath and starling;—no ribbon nor motto.

No. 4, The imprint of another shield has been sent us, the same as No. 1, except the crest is a falcon resting on a wreath; it was probably made for some one in this country, as it has neither helmet nor mantle, but has on a ribbon the motto, Absque labore nihil; Nothing without Labor. It was made in London and bears the name below of Joseph Barker Stearns.

No. 5, Mr. M. A. Stearns of Brooklyn, N. Y., has furnished the impress of a beautifully cut oval seal, three-quarters of an inch long, of same design as No. 1, except it has crosses patonce, with family name on the ribbon and chevron bears the motto Exitus actor probat.—The Event approves the Act. He says this seal was made about 1822 for his father.

No. 6, Mr. James P. Stearns, of Springfield, Mass., sends photograph of a shield much like No. 1, except it has for a crest a goat's head resting on a crown.

No. 7, The Family Memorial, a neatly gotten up volume, published at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1891, by Mr. George Chapin Stearns, being genealogy of a part of our family, the descendants of Benjamin Stearns, shows arms like No. 3, adding a ribbon below with motto Labore et Scientia,—Labor and Science.

The Pitcher of Hon. Isaac Stearns (No. 366) of Billerica, Mass., shown opposite page 79, which was probably made in Liverpool, England, and sent to the recipient about 1784, carries for a shield, or, three crosses flory, sa., substituting a garland of white roses and forget-me-nots in place of the helmet, with a mantle of same flowers, and has on ribbon below, "The Arms of Stearns." He omits the chevron and starling, evidently with the view of establishing arms for the family here, which should discourage all warlike instincts.

ALBERT STEARNS.

No. 4261.

Orthography of Name Stearns.

Stearns, Sternes, Sterns, Starns, etc., etc., is undoubtedly a variation or corruption of the name Sterne, which has been effected in this country. It probably commenced in the pronunciation, and extended to the writing of the name. In the early town and county records the name is written Sterne, in Winthrop's Journal it is also written Sterne. "It is also a well known name in the counties of Nottingham, Berks, Norfolk, Hertford, Suffolk and Cambridge, in England, but the name Stearns has not occurred to the writer, in any English work." In the will of Isaac Stearns 1st. of the first generation, Vol 1, the name is spelled Sternes, the surplus terminal "s" being sometimes used in England. The variation Starns and Starnes, is distinctly southern, while very few have retained the original and correct orthography. The varied spellings will be found as they were given by the writer of their records and all families of English descent have been transcribed in their proper places or in the appendix. "In every instance where the lineage of this family has been traced back, it has been to one of the following: Isaac, Charles, or Nathaniel; what relationship existed between the three is not known. Isaac in his will calls Charles "My kinsman;" it is noticeable, however, that all three named their sons, Isaac, Samuel and John, while the sons of Isaac. named their sons Nathaniel.

Mrs. M. A. Whitney of Madrid, N. Y., writes, under date of Feb., 1894, "My father died when I was quite young, but I have often heard my Grandfather Stearns tell the story of the three brothers."

Mr. Melvin H. Stearns of St. Louis, Mo., writes, under date of Oct., 1893, "I have never seen Bond's Genealogies, but the story of the three brothers is quite familiar to me, as told by my uncle, Gould Stearns."

Dr. Phineas Sewall Stearns of Buffalo, N. Y., writes, under date of Nov., 1893, "My father, Samuel, who was born in 1784, assured me that it was a positive fact that the original Isaac, Charles and Nathaniel were brothers," and many others have given similar testimony.

On May 17, 1662, Thomas Clark sold a parcel of land in Boston, Mass., bounded S. E. by land of Daniel Sternes (Suffolk Deeds IV., pg. 268). This is the only record or notice of this Daniel Stearns. The belief is entertained by many of the Stearns descendants that three Sterne brothers came to America together, named respectively, Isaac, Daniel and Shubael; that Daniel died unmarried or without issue; that Shubael and wife died, leaving two sons, Charles and Nathaniel to the care of their uncle, Isaac. Research in England has thus far failed to find the parents, brothers or sisters of Isaac Stearns, the emigrant from England.

To Trace a Lineage.

When only one number is mentioned in connection with a masculine name he is being numerated in the parental family, and has no descendants that are carried to the next generation.

When two numbers are used, the larger refers to him as the head of his own family and always mentions the parental names in this connection; hence to trace a lineage back, refer from the larger number to the lesser one, then trace back a few numbers until you find the parental names, which numbers will in turn refer to the preceding generation.

The Arabella.

Early in the morning of April 8, 1630, Isaac Stearns (Vol. 1, No. 1) and family, Sir Richard Saltonstall and family, Rev. George Phillips, Gov. Winthrop and many others embarked at Yarmouth, England, in the good ship Arabella, and arrived at Salem, Mass., on June 12. The ship Jewel arrived June 13; the ship Ambrose, June 18; the Talbot, July 2. From the Memorial History of Boston, Mass., by Justin Winsor, Vol. 1, page 115 shows a small cut of the Arabella, reproduced from a painting in Salem or Boston. The Arabella, the admiral of the fleet, was a ship of 350 tons burden, carrying 28 guns and 52 seamen, with Capt. Nathaniel Melbourne master and part owner. The accompanying cut of the Arabella is from a reproduction of the painting by William F. Halsall, representing a part of the fleet which brought Winthrop and his company to Salem Harbor. The Talbot, the vice-admiral, was shown at anchor, while the Jewel, the coplin of the fleet, was the distant vessel on the right.

From the History of Middlesex Co., by Samuel Adams Drake, Vol. I., page 25, we quote, "Isaac Johnson, esteemed the richest of the emigrants, inherited an estate of £20,000 from his grandfather, Robert Johnson of North Luffingham, in 1584; with his wife Arabella, daughter of Thomas, third Earl of Lincoln, he came over in Winthrop's ship, "The Eagle," which, in his wife's honor, was rechristened "The Arabella." Lady Arabella died at Salem, Mass., a few weeks after the arrival and her husband, who survived her only a few months, was interred at the upper end of his lot in Boston, in what is now known as "The King's Burying Ground."

The Arabella and her consorts experienced a varied and stormy passage, and, on the 8th of June, there came a wild pigeon into the ship. They came to anchor on the seventy-sixth day, June 12, 1630, O. S.

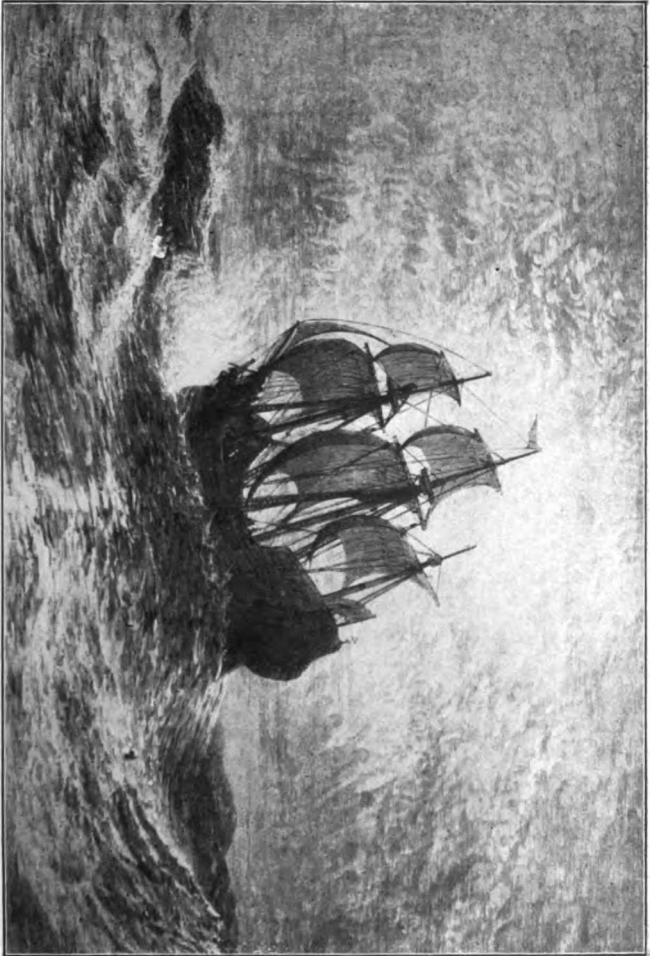

THE ARABIAN

On June 10, 1639, at 8 o'clock, Isaac Stearns, the first mate of the ship, and the constable and families of the ship, and many others, were on the shore to see the good ship Arabian, which was on June 12. The ship was on the shore on June 18; the Third Fleet of the Arabian, which was on June 18, shows a detail of the Arabian, which was on a party in Salon or Boston. The ship, which was on the fact, was a ship of 37 guns, 100 tons, 25 guns and 52 seamen, with a captain, and the master and part owner. The ship was on the fact from a reproduction of the painting of the Arabian, representing a part of the fleet of the Arabian, which was on the fact. The Arabian, the vice-admiral, was shown at a distance of the Jew, the captain of the fleet, was the distance of the Jew.

The History of the Middlesex Co., by Samuel Adams, in the History of the Middlesex Co., we quote, "Isaac Johnson, esteemed for his piety and talents, inherited an estate of £20,000. He was married to Robert Johnson of North Luffingham, and his wife Arabella, daughter of Thomas, third Lord of the Manor, he came over in Winthrop's ship, 'The Arabian,' in his wife's honor, was rechristened 'The Lady Arabella' died at Salem, Mass., a few months after the arrival and her husband, who survived her several months, was interred at the upper end of his lot in the churchyard, which is now known as 'The King's Burying place' and her consorts experienced a varied and interesting life, and, on the 8th of June, there came a wild storm, which was the ship. They came to anchor on the 10th of June, June 12, 1639. O. S.

Henry Bond

Life of Henry Bond.

Henry Bond Jr, son of Henry and Elizabeth Bond (Great Col. 867), was born Mar. 21, 1806, at Hebron, Me. (Great Col. 867); grad. Dartmouth Coll., 1813; was in the army two years; A. M., 1816; M. D., 1817; resided in Hebron, N. H., and, in Nov., 1819, moved to Waterville, Me. He resided, unmarried, devoted to his profession, and author of several articles in the Medical Repository. His "The Genealogies and History of Waterville, Me." is unrivalled by any similar work elsewhere in the country, and that part pertaining to the town has been reproduced in these pages. We are indebted to the author to reprint here a memoir of this town, written from the pen of Horatio Gates Jones, A. M., in the Trans. Hist. Soc. of Penn.

Life of Henry Bond.

Henry Bond Jr., son of Henry and Hannah (Stearns) Bond (First Vol. 897), was born Mar. 21, 1790, in Watertown, Mass.; grad. Dartmouth Coll., 1813; was tutor there nearly two years; A. M., 1816; M. D., 1817; settled first in Concord, N. H., and, in Nov., 1819, moved to Philadelphia, where he resided, unmarried, devoted to his profession. He was the author of several articles in the Medical Journals, and of "The Genealogies and History of Watertown, Mass.," which is unrivalled by any similar work ever published in this country, and that part pertaining to the Stearns family has been reproduced in these pages. We consider it due to the author to reprint here a memoir of this remarkable man, from the pen of Horatio Gates Jones, A. M., Cor. Sec. of the Hist. Soc. of Penn.

"In the month of March, 1806, Henry Bond commenced his academical course, at Hebron Academy, and remained there until Sept., 1809, when he was admitted to the freshman class of Dartmouth Coll., and was duly graduated, in Aug., 1813. While in college he exhibited a fondness for the exact sciences, and was considered a good mathematician. When he graduated, his class numbered forty-one, although, during the sophomore year, it had as many as sixty members. Among his classmates were Rev. Joseph B. Felt, LL. D., Rev. Benjamin F. Farnsworth, D. D., Rev. Austin Dickinson, Frederick Cushing, M. D., and Rev. Rufus William Bailey. Immediately after his graduation, Henry Bond commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Cyrus Perkins, who was Prof. of Anatomy in Dartmouth Coll., and Dr. Nathan Smith, Prof. of Surgery. In Mar.,

1815, he was elected a tutor in the college and resigned in Aug., 1816. The period he spent there as tutor was full of interest and excitement, for it was in the midst of the troubles about the charter of Dartmouth Coll., the history of which has become incorporated with the judicial decisions of our country, and is so closely connected with the fame of New Hampshire's noblest son,—the lamented Webster. In Dec., 1816, Henry Bond received his medical degree, and, early in the following January, commenced the practice of his profession in Concord, N. H. During his residence there, he delivered each summer for three years a course of popular lectures on chemistry, and, at the same time, continued his general literary studies. In 1818, he was chosen to deliver the oration before the New Hampshire Alpha of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, and selected as his theme 'Traits of American Genius.' The ms. of the oration shows that devotion to his profession had not produced a distaste for the paths of literature. Having relatives in Augusta, Me., Dr. Bond concluded to settle there, but, wishing to perfect himself in a knowledge of his profession, in Nov, 1819, he went to Philadelphia to attend lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, whose medical department, then as now, enjoyed a world-wide reputation. Here he formed several new and strong friendships—and when, in 1820, he was about to remove to Augusta, where an office had already been engaged, he was persuaded to make Philadelphia his permanent abode. His trunks had been packed for his departure, but the inducements offered were so kind and generous, that he consented to stay. He accordingly commenced the practice of medicine in Philadelphia in the spring of 1820, and, having, as a new beginner, considerable leisure, he taught, at his office, classes in practical and general surgery. These classes were well-attended and were continued for several years. The character of the medical profession of Philadelphia has always been high-toned, and, in a great measure, exclusive. Hence, it so happened, that the societies which the earlier physicians of Philadelphia formed for their mutual improvement, were difficult of access, except by those of acknowledged merit. Yet, in Dec., 1819, Dr. Bond was elected an honorary member of the Philadelphia Medical Society and he continued to be an active member of it, until it became extinct. In 1823, there was organized, in Philadelphia, the Kappa Lambda Society, the object of which was medical improvement, with special reference to medical ethics. Of this society he became an early member, and was, for some time, its secretary. In May, 1824, he delivered an address before the New England Society of Philadelphia, which was published, at the request of the society.

“Having once attained a position and given evidence of professional eminence as well as personal worth, Dr. Bond found himself gladly welcomed by his medical brethren into their societies and private coteries. In the course of several years, he was successively elected a Fellow of the Philadelphia College of Physicians, in 1825; its Secretary, 1832; one of its censors, in 1844. In 1840, and again in 1850, this college sent him as a delegate to the Decennial National Convention held in Washington City, for revising the United States’ Pharmacopoeia. In May, 1846, he attended the first Medical Convention which met in New York to organize a National Medical Association, and he generally attended its subsequent meetings. In 1847, he was a member of the Convention held in Lancaster, Pa., for the purpose of organizing a State Medical Association, and was one of the committee which drafted the constitution. He was also a member of the Board of Health of the city of Philadelphia from 1833 to 1838, and its President during 1837-8.

“It is thus seen that Dr. Bond’s talents and professional ability were appreciated by his brethren—those who are supposed to be the best judges—and this was all the more flattering from the fact that he himself was modest and retiring to a fault. He had energy, perseverance and talents but he was not obtrusive and hence he was indebted to his own sterling merit for his advancement. In due course of time he attained considerable practice, which continued to increase from year to year, until, by habits of careful economy, he had acquired a competency sufficient for his support: but, even then he did not desist from active duties, until failing health and devotion to a new study compelled him to husband his strength. His chief branch of practice was obstetrics, to which he paid much careful attention and in which he was very successful. He was accustomed to make a note of every such case that was under his care, and a small volume, still preserved, shows the exactness with which he noted every event connected with his obstetrical practice. His mechanical as well as surgical knowledge was particularly displayed in contriving some useful instruments and apparatus, which are now in general use by the profession, and which will long perpetuate his name as one of the benefactors of mankind.

“But the great work of Dr. Bond, to which he devoted the latter part of his life, and in which he became so deeply and engrossingly interested, was ‘The Genealogies and History of Watertown,’ which is almost unrivalled by any similar work ever published in this country. This remarkable book, which attained its present magnitude from a very small beginning, originated in the preparation of a Genealogy of the Bond Family, which Dr. Bond had begun as early as 1840. At first, he designed it to be a mere family memorial, but, as he advanced in his researches, he found that much material, other than what he first sought, grew upon his hands, and then the idea occurred to him of making it general in its character, so as to include all the early families of his native town. The work was begun and as it advanced the author seemed to appreciate the importance of the researches in which he was engaged. His views are worthy of special notice. He believed that, ‘Genealogies, besides gratifying a natural and enlightened curiosity, may exercise a salutary influence, tending to maintain in their social position families already elevated, and to elevate the lowly,’ and he also firmly held, ‘that when persons affect an utter indifference to their lineage, or a history of the past generations of their families, and deride any attention to them as a foolish weakness and vanity, they are contravening an innate principle, and it may be generally suspected that they have some knowledge of a lineage they would consign to oblivion, because it is untitled and without good renown.’ While pursuing his investigations, Dr. Bond visited various localities in New England, and spent much time in examining town records for facts not to be found elsewhere. He employed persons to make copies of records and other valuable documents, and was materially aided by his friend, Horatio G. Somerby, Esq., who made researches for him in Enøland. His correspondence on this subject extended throughout the whole country, and he hesitated at no expense or trouble to unravel some disputed point or make clear some intricate genealogy. For several years he gave nearly all his leisure time to the collecting and arranging of the materials thus gathered from every quarter, and when he had so far succeeded as to bring this heterogeneous mass of dry and dull statistics into shape, he submitted the question of immediate publication to his friends, and, by their advice, the first part was printed, but not published, in 1852. This was done, as may be remarked of the entire book, with the greatest diffidence on the part of the author, who was as sensitive of the world's opinion of his effort, as if he were freshly entering the arena. So modest were his own ideas of the values of his work, and so reluctant was he to speak of it, that the book was nearly completed before even his professional associates knew that he was engaged in such a labor. To one, who, entering the Doctor's study, found him reading proof, he remarked, 'I shall let you see this now, but don't speak of it to others.' To the writer, who made his acquaintance while in the midst of the publication, the Dr. said that he did not care to have people know what he was doing, as they would be sure to laugh at him. This may have been owing to the fact that, in Philadelphia, little attention is paid to genealogical studies. The great work was finally completed and given to the public in 1855. It met with warm praise both at home and abroad, and the Doctor's heart was often made glad by receiving from his friends their commendatory letters.

"It does not become the writer of this memoir to criticize the great work as a literary labor, or as a correct and truthful Genealogical History of the Watertown Families. It speaks for itself, and will ever remain an enduring witness of the untiring energy, the unflagging research, and the indomitable zeal of its respected and lamented author. But this much he can say, that when the last page was written and the pen laid aside, Dr. Bond might have exclaimed without fear of being criticised for egotism, 'Exegi monumentum, aere perennius,'—for, when the marble which marks his resting-place shall have crumbled to ruins, this work will survive, and succeeding years, as they rapidly haste away, will only add increased lustre to his name and embalm it in the minds of thousands who shall yet tread the soil of his own loved New England.

"It has been stated that Dr. Bond was well known, beyond the limits of his own profession, as a lover of antiquarian researches. His renown as a student in this department led to his election to various posts of honor throughout the country. In addition to the societies already named, he was also chosen a member of the Academy of Natural Sciences, the National Institute, the American Statistical Association, the New England Historic Genealogical Society, the American Antiquarian Society, and the Historical Societies of the States of Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, Wisconsin and Massachusetts.

"In the month of August, 1858, Dr. Bond visited New England, and was warmly received by his large circle of friends. Within a month after his return to Philadelphia, while passing through the grounds of Washington Square, he was suddenly stricken down with paralysis, and although he rallied afterwards, yet his nervous system was completely shattered, and his mind was much impaired. For many years he had suffered from an affection of the heart, and this sudden prostration of his powers produced a marked change in his general health. He still kept up his correspondence—corrected his large Genealogical Work—visited a few patients—and always seemed glad when friends called to see him; but it was apparent that his days were numbered. On the morning of the fourth of May, 1859, he was found lifeless in his room. It is supposed that during the night, he had risen to procure something, and either had an attack of apoplexy, or, fell down and struck his temple. On the Saturday following his death, he was interred in the Laurel Hill Cemetery, near Philadelphia. His funeral was attended by a large number of his medical and personal friends, and the religious services were conducted by the Rev. Albert Barnes, of whose church, the First Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, he had been a member for many years. Dr. Bond, at the time of his decease, was in the seventieth year of his age. He had never been married. He left a will, dated Apr. 3, 1858. After devising the bulk of his estate for life to three of his near relatives in Philadelphia, he makes Dartmouth College his residuary legatee and directs the income to be appropriated to the purchase of books for the college library. He couples with this legacy the following direction: 'Any student of the college of the name of Bond, a descendant of William Bond, Esq., and his wife, Sarah (Bisco) Bond, who settled in Watertown, Mass., as early as the year sixteen hundred fifty (1650), shall be entitled to receive, and shall receive of the income of this legacy to the college, one hundred dollars a year, so long as he shall continue an undergraduate at said college.' He also bequeathed to the college for their library all his miscellaneous books, including those relating to history, genealogy and antiquities, not otherwise disposed of.

"To the New England Historic Genealogical Society he bequeathed his interleaved copies of the Watertown Family Memorial; his manuscript books or papers pertaining to town or church histories, including his scrap-book, containing the records of births, deaths and marriages in Woburn; also his files of letters relating to genealogy or antiquities; and all the unbound copies of the Watertown Memorial. These mss. are exceedingly valuable, comprising, with his correspondence, his entire collection of materials, from which he prepared his great work on Watertown. The copies of the Memorial number at least one thousand volumes; and the Society, to show their estimate of this legacy—the first which has ever been bequeathed to them—have placed them in the hands of trustees, who design to invest the proceeds arising from the sale of the book, in a fund, which, out of regard to the donor, is to be called 'The Bond Fund.' The trustees of this fund are Messrs. Almon D. Hodges, Frederic Kidder, and John Ward Dean.

"As a man Dr. Bond was most highly esteemed wherever known. As a Christian, he was sincere and honest. He was a regular attendant and member of the Presbyterian Church, a believer in the great doctrines of the Christian faith, who availed himself of church privileges but was not actively engaged in outward religious duties. He seemed averse to the exhibition of emotional feeling in that which related to his spiritual life. As a physician, he occupied a high position, especially in the city where he lived and died.

“D. Francis Condie, M. D., of Philadelphia, a leading member of the medical profession, in a recent communication to the writer, says: ‘Dr. Bond was well-grounded in both the theory and practice of all the branches of the healing art. His favorite branches were, however, surgery and obstetrics. In both of these departments he devised several original instruments and apparatus, and suggested important modifications of one or more of those in common use, all of which have received the sanction of the most distinguished practitioners. The practice of Dr. Bond was by no means confined to the departments just referred to. In that which embraces the pathology and therapeutics of internal diseases generally, he had an extensive clinical experience, the results of which afforded a favorable evidence of his expertness as a medical practitioner.

“‘The mind of Dr. Bond was marked by depth and solidity, rather than by quickness and brilliancy, and applied itself with the utmost zeal to the cultivation of the exact sciences—such as demanded close and cautious investigation and are based solely upon demonstrable truths. He was averse to every species of hypothetical reasoning, and had little faith in any proposition sustained by a chain of collateral arguments rather than by positive facts. He was slow in the formation of his judgments, but, when finally determined, it was no easy task to shake his confidence in their correctness.

“‘The position which Dr. Bond held, as a member of the medical profession, was one of the highest respectability. It was among those who had an opportunity to become fully acquainted with his medical knowledge and skill—his classical attainments—the sincerity and truthfulness of his character—his stern integrity—and to experience, day after day, his unfailing urbanity of deportment, that he was appreciated at his true value. In Philadelphia, which was the field of his entire medical career, Dr. Bond enjoyed the respect and confidence of his professional brethren. With all their organizations with scarcely an exception, he was affiliated, and upon him was conferred almost every office of trust and honor within their gift; and he was made the recipient of such honors as indicated the high esteem formed by his medical brethren of his attainments—professional, classical and literary, as well as of his moral worth.’

“Such is a brief sketch of the life and labors of one, whom to know was to esteem most highly; whose memory will long be cherished by a large circle of warm and attached friends, and whose name will ever occupy a high rank among the genealogists of America.”

Charles Stearns.

FIRST GENERATION.

"In March, 1628, the Plymouth Company sold to a company of six gentlemen in England, the territory extending from a line three miles north of Merrimack River, to a line three miles south of Charles River, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. The number of joint proprietors soon became much enlarged and they assumed the title of "The Massachusetts Bay Company," choosing Matthew Cradock, a wealthy merchant of London, to be governor, and Thomas Goffe, also a merchant of London, to be deputy-governor. In June, 1628, a company of emigrants was sent over, who landed at Salem and commenced the settlement of that ancient town. That a large number of settlers accompanied Sir Richard Saltonstall from Salem to Watertown is evident from the following consideration, that about forty men signed the covenant on the 30th of July, while the number of female members is not stated. Others, having large families, did not then sign the covenant, not being entitled to church membership. There is no record extant of any municipal transactions of Watertown earlier, in date, than 1634, four years after its first settlement.

An important change then took place in the government of the colony and a house of deputies or representatives became a constituent part of it. As the people, from this date, began to be represented in the government of the colony, so, the ordering of the civil affairs of the town began to be intrusted to a body of freemen, chosen annually, for that purpose. Then originated that peculiar New England municipal body, a board of select-men.

Previous to this date, the civil and ecclesiastical affairs of the town were commingled, without any distinct line between them. No one had a right to vote, unless he were a church-member; and the church was Congregational wherein its affairs were managed by the votes of the members. The church officers seem to have taken the lead both in civil and ecclesiastical affairs, and, it is probable that, previous to 1634, the records were kept accordingly. Whatever those records were, they are lost." Charles Stearns was admitted freeman, May 6, 1646. On Mar. 15, 1648, he purchased of Edward Lamb, of Watertown, a house and eight acres of land, and three other lots. On the same day, he purchased of John Fiske, six acres of upland. Isaac Stearns, (First Vol. I), in his will, dated, June 14, 1861, mentioned him as my kinsman, Charles "Sternes," and bequeathed him £10. Samuel Hosier also bequeathed to him £10, but without stating any relationship. Jan. 6, 1680-1, he was elected constable, or tax-gatherer, of Watertown, but refused to take the oath; and the same year, he sold his land in Watertown to his son, Samuel. It is supposed that soon after this he, with his son Shubael, moved to that part of Lynn, called Lynn End, now the town of Lynnfield. His first wife, Hannah, d., June 30, 1651, in Watertown and was buried July 2, 1651. He m. (2), June 22, 1654, Rebecca Gibson, dau. of John and Rebecca Gibson, of Cambridge. The births of their first two children are recorded in Cambridge, but she was a member of the Watertown Church, Feb., 1658-9. (See Camb. Church Gathering, p. 59.) The following extract from the Essex Registry of Probate shows the number and the names of his children, at least, of those who lived to maturity, or to have families: "Sept. 9, 1695, Shubael Stearns, of Lynn, petitions for letters of administration on the estate of his brother, Charles, slain in the King's service. Balance of his estate after settlement of debts (£4, 12s., 10d.). to be divided as follows:—equally between his brothers, Shubael and John; the children of brothers Samuel and Isaac; Rebecca Sternes alias Traine, and Martha Hutchinson, his sisters." "There is a tradition prevalent in Lynn, Mass., that three brother, names Daniel, Isaac (First Vol. I) and Shubael Stearns, came from England to America in 1630, and settled near Watertown, Mass.; that Daniel died, unmarried; that Shubael and Isaac each brought their families with them; that, soon after landing, Shubael and wife both died, leaving two sons, named Charles and Nathaniel, eight or ten years of age, who were reared and cared for by their Uncle Isaac; this same account was given by John Peck Stearns (6822); that these sons afterwards married and each, as well as their Uncle Isaac, left a large family, from whom all of the name of Stearns in America are supposed to have descended. It is noticable that Isaac (First Vol. I.), Charles and Nathaniel all named their sons John, Isaac and Samuel. There is also a traditional anecdote of the first landing of the Stearns family, as follows: "that on reaching anchorage in America, Isaac, like the spies sent into Canaan, went forward and selected a place of settlement; soon after, an emulation arose between the two boys as to which should step on land first, and, as they sprang from the boat, Charles Stearns missed his footing and fell into the river which was therefore christened the Charles River." Nevertheless, the historian claims for the name a royal origin.

About 1714, he removed to Tolland, Conn., of which he was the first Town Clerk. About 1750, with his sons and daughters and their families, he left Tolland on account of ecclesiastical difficulties, and settled near Newbern, N. C. He and his family were Baptists and some of them have exercised a great influence upon the religious sentiments of the South. Their residence in North Carolina was at a place called "Pepper Cotton," and a pamphlet was published at the time giving an account of the troubles in Tolland, Conn.

After moving South, the broad Southern pronunciation was given to the name and it has since been generally written and pronounced Starnes; ten children.

"In 1745, he joined the followers of George Whitfield, who were called the 'Church of New Lights;' in 1751, his attention was called to the question of baptism, and he was immersed by Rev. Wait Palmer at Tolland, Conn., and in 1754, accompanied by his parents and other friends, he set out for Virginia. His first stop was at Opeckoa, Berkeley Co., Va.; then went with his brother-in-law, Rev. Daniel Marshall, about thirty miles from Winchester, Va.; afterwards settled permanently at Sandy Creek, North Carolina, where in a few years, his little church grew from a membership of sixteen to six hundred and six. He was no ordinary man, but eminently successful in persuading men to accept and serve Jesus; in stature, small, but with a peculiarly penetrating eye and a very musical voice. Rev. Shubael Stearns d., Nov. 20, 1771, after much suffering, dying as he had lived, in simple, confident reliance upon the love of God. The influence of his great work still lives throughout the regions where he faithfully preached, as a pioneer, the simple story of salvation by faith."

Maj. Dewey's first wife was the wid. of Solomon Jackson, who d. of small-pox, leaving a dau., who md. Rev. Jacob Catlin, D. D., of New Marlboro. By first wife, Major Dewey had one son, Thomas Dewey. His second wife, Beulah Stearns, was a resolute, strong-minded woman, very capable, and well-calculated to bring up a large family in the wilds of Vermont. They moved to Poultney, Vt., in 1774, in company with her brother-in-law, Ichabod Marshall. Her character was notably generous, kind and self-reliant. "After Maj. Dewey's death, Mrs. Dewey and her sister, Mrs. Marshall, also a widow, were called upon by Mr. Thomas Ashley, Esq., a widower, who asked, 'Mrs. Marshall, do you wish to change your condition?' "No, sir,' she replied, with emphasis, 'but my sister does.' Mrs. Dewey and Mr. Ashley were accordingly married. He lived about a year afterwards, and she then resided with her son, Azariah Dewey, until her decease."

He was also Preceptor of the noted Liberal School, in Lincoln, Mass.

“Dr. Charles Stearns was in the ministry over forty-five years, preached his last sermon the first Sunday in July, 1826, and died on the twenty-sixth of the same month. His monument was erected by the town which was then one parish. He was a man of high ability, deeply revered by his people; a man who refused to enter into the controversy between Trinitarian and Unitarian Congregationalists, exchanging freely with those of both opinions until his death. The following extract from ‘The Gambrel(roofed House,’ by Oliver Wendell Holmes, speaks for itself:

“The middle-aged and young men have left comparatively faint impressions on my memory, but how grandly the procession of the old clergymen, who filled our pulpit from time to time and passed the day under our roof, marches before my closed eyes! At their head, the most venerable David Osgood, the majestic minister of Medford, with massive front and shaggy, overshadowing eyebrows; following in the train, mild-eyed John Foster of Brighton, with the lambent aurora of a smile about his pleasant mouth which not even the "Sabbath" could subdue to the true Levitical aspect; and bulky Charles Stearns of Lincoln, author of "The Ladies' Philosophy of Love. A poem. 1797." (How I stared at him! He was the first living person ever pointed out to me as a poet!); and Thaddeus Mason Harris, of Dorchester.' " Rev. Charles Stearns md., Jan. 7, 1782, Susanna Cowdry, of Reading, Mass., by whom he had six sons and five daughters.

“The following tribute from the late William H. Wells, of Chicago, gives a pleasant picture of the man and the times: ‘Judge Stearns was one of the deacons of the church which I attended during all the earlier years of my life. His face was as familiar to me as that of my own father, and his portrait recalls many pleasant memories of those far-off days. His house was always open Sabbath noons to those who lived too far away to go home between the morning and afternoon services, and I was there many times. His family pew was next to the pulpit, at the minister’s left, but he always sat in the deacons seat, directly in front of the pulpit. No man in Tolland was better known or held in higher esteem than Judge Stearns.’”

Of the village of Tolland, his grandson writes: “If there is any spot in this wide, wide world, that I have a right to call my home, it is this little town of Tolland, nestled up here among the rock-ribbed hills of Tolland Co. It was in this peaceful, pleasant town, that Elisha Stearns spent his own peaceful, useful and honorable life.”

“General Field Hospital,
Chattanooga, Tenn.,
Mar. 9, 1864.

Dear Sister, (Hannah Stearns):

How long it has been since we have written to each other! I cannot think of any reason for it, only for the last four months I have not been able to write, but I answered the last letter received from you and have not heard from you since. I hope that sisterly and brotherly love has not died out entirely between us. I can answer for myself that it has not and am not disposed to doubt you, but must assign silence to some better cause, only let us be a little more prompt in future in writing to each other. I suppose you have heard that I was wounded on the 25th. of Nov., in the battle of Missionary Ridge. The ball passed in at the joint of my elbow on the outside and was cut out on the inside. It shattered the bone to such an extent that it was necessary to cut it open and take out nearly all the bones in the joint, so that my arm will be almost useless to me. It was nearly healed but continues to break out in different places yet. About a week after it was operated upon, I was taken with pneumonia, which with the wound has kept me on my back, in one position, ever since. I could sit up a good part of the time, but being in a field hospital, in a tent where there are no chairs or other conveniences, I can get up only once a week to have my clothes changed and bed made. If I could have been put into a comfortable hospital at first, where I could have had good attention and diet, I think I should have been well long before now; but now, I am so poor and weak that I cannot raise myself on my limbs. I am in hopes that, as the weather gets settled, I shall gain faster and be able to go North. I hear from home often. They were well the last I heard. I am getting tired and must close. Give my respects to J. B. and the family generally with all inquiring friends, and tell me all the news about your village, and accept the love and respect of your brother, FREDERIC STEARNS."

The original letter is in the possession of Frederic Albert Stearns, nephew of the above.

The following short sketch was written by her own hand after she was eighty years old: "I was born in West Springfield, Mass., Jan. 18, 1797, being the youngest daughter of William McIntyre and his wife, Sarah Leonard. I became interested in the Methodist church when only six years of age. I was first married, in 1815 to Philo French, and in Aug., 1818, we came to Medina Co., O., where my husband died, leaving me with three little boys, Philo, Aaron and Henry French. Henry died in 1847. In 1825, I married your father Daniel Stearns, who was left with the care of his aged father and mother. We lived very happily and cared for the old people until they died. Dear children, I say to you as David of old said to his son Solomon: 'And now know thou the God of thy fathers, and serve Him with a perfect heart and a willing mind, for the Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts. If thou wilt seek Him, He will be found of thee; but if thou forsake Him, He will cast thee off forever.'" "Mr. Stearns received his education in the public schools of his native city, supplemented by a mercantile course, and business training in one of the Boston banks. In 1849, he painted a Panorama of the Hudson River, from the mouth of the Mohawk to Fort William, a canvas nine hundred ft. long and eight ft. wide. In 1850, he visited the coal-fields of Southern Indiana, and in 1854, was appointed prospector and resident clerk for several Copper Cos., with headquarters at Keeweenaw Point, Lake Superior. In 1858, he went to California, via Havana and the Isthmus of Panama, leaving New York in May, and reaching San Francisco in June. For four years he was connected with the principal printing and publishing house of San Francisco, and on the editorial staff of 'The Pacific,' a leading weekly. In 1862, he was appointed Deputy Clerk of the Supreme Court, and, in 1863, resigned to become Secretary of the Board of State Harbor Commissioners. Upon the termination of his relations with the Board, on account of ill-health, in 1868, he was presented with a service of plate made of Nevada silver. Until 1870, he was in the Atlantic States, and, with some scientific friends, visited Florida, where, for several months, he made large collections of Natural History material for the Smithsonian Institution and himself. In 1874, he was elected Secretary of the Board of Regents of the University of California, Dr. Daniel C. Gilman being Pres. This office Mr. Stearns held for nearly eight years, when failing health compelled him to resign. The Board of Regents passed unanimously a series of appreciative resolutions, and conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, in recognition "of his scientific attainments and as a merited testimonial to his protracted service," and as "expressive of their sense of his great service

He received his early education in the schools of his native town, and attended the Shelburne Falls Academy, where his future wife was one of his schoolmates. From many printed sketches of his life, we select the following:

"We know of no man in Western Massachusetts whose biography is better worth writing and publishing in full. He was popular as a lawyer, a citizen, and a neighbor." "George Munroe Stearns, of Chicopee, the great pleader of the Western Massachusetts Bar, and the lawyer, strong at all points, who has been a familiar figure at all the court-houses in the four western counties for many years, died, at his residence, on the morning of Monday, Dec. 31, 1894, of congestion of the lungs and hemorrhage. The end came after long months of suffering borne with patience and courage and enlivened by a hope which was never dimmed. A letter received from him, by one of his Chicopee friends, the Saturday before his death, was full of cheerful plans for the winter, including the purchase of a new horse with which to enjoy the beautiful drives about Boston. Practically, all of his life has been lived here among us, and few men have been better known, or more generally loved and admired than he. The public has known him as a man of most original qualities, an intense, brilliant, and successful lawyer; his friends appreciate him as one of the most congenial and choicest of spirits, full of wit and apt speech and, withal, abounding in a tenderness and fine feeling, which, in genuineness and grace, might be called womanly. His father was the minister of the Unitarian Church at Rowe, Mass., and George was the typical 'minister's son.' About 1849, he entered the law-office, at Chicopee, of John Wells, afterwards Judge of the Supreme Court of Mass.; was admitted to the bar, in 1852, and immediately began practice as a partner of Judge Wells. Later he opened an office in Springfield, Mass., with the late E. D. Beach, who was his partner for some time, as have also been since, Judge Marcus P. Knowlton, and Mayor Charles L. Long. Of his home-life it is only necessary to say that it has been almost an ideal one. As a man he was large-minded, large-hearted, kindly and lovable. He had always been a public man but had held few public offices, refusing over and over again nominations to Congress, and several times declining to be his party's candidate for Governor. He was elected to the House of Representatives by the Democratic party in 1859, and was a member of the committee which revised the Public Statutes in 1860. In 1871, he was in the Senate and, in 1872, was elected District Attorney for the Western District, but resigned at the end of two years. The same year he was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention, at Cincinnati, and favored the nomination of Horace Greeley. He was a candidate for Lieut.-Gov. on the Dem. ticket with John Quincy Adams, and later when the Democrats nominated Charles Sumner, was nominated Lieut.-Gov. with him also, but, on Sumner's refusal, Mr. Stearns followed his example. His counsel in political matters has been frequently sought by party-leaders, and men of position and influence, and has always been most highly valued. He was a shrewd observer, a careful student, and an accurate judge of men and events. His practice was most extensive, covering all branches of the law and taking him into the highest courts of the country. His characteristics as a lawyer were his own, and in his methods of preparing cases, of presenting them to court or jury, and of examining witnesses, they were unique and Stearnsy. No one could copy them, though many have tried and disastrously failed. He was strong, positive and aggressive, a man to make his personality felt wherever he went, and in whatever company he might find himself. His wit was proverbial; every one who knew George M. Stearns knew that side of him. He was a full man, in the sense of being well-read, with an intelligent grasp on a great many subjects, and his conversation was bright, sparkling, filled with gleanings from his extensive reading, and yet thoughtful. Taken by the large, George M. Stearns was a great man."

Mr. John K. Stearns sends us the following patriotic gem, from a speech made at a meeting of the Underwriters' Association of Chicago, Ill.:

"I shall never forget a beautiful Sunday morning in Florence, Italy. We were attending service at the Scotch Presbyterian Church on the other side of the Arno, and had not been seated long before our attention was drawn to a restless little American boy, with a tin tube in his hand, which he was industriously scratching with his knife during the exceedingly long prayer and trying to get the top off. A number of the congregation were disturbed by the noise, and Dr. McDougall himself more than once nervously turned his venerable head in the direction of the little offender, but the prayer went on.

"The Dr. prayed for the King and Queen of Italy, then for Queen Victoria and the Prince of Wales, and, just as he had begun to pray for the President of the United States, the catch on top of the tube sprang up, and, as neat a little American flag as ever floated in the breeze shot out, and, waving, in full view, created a profound and absolutely thrilling sensation.

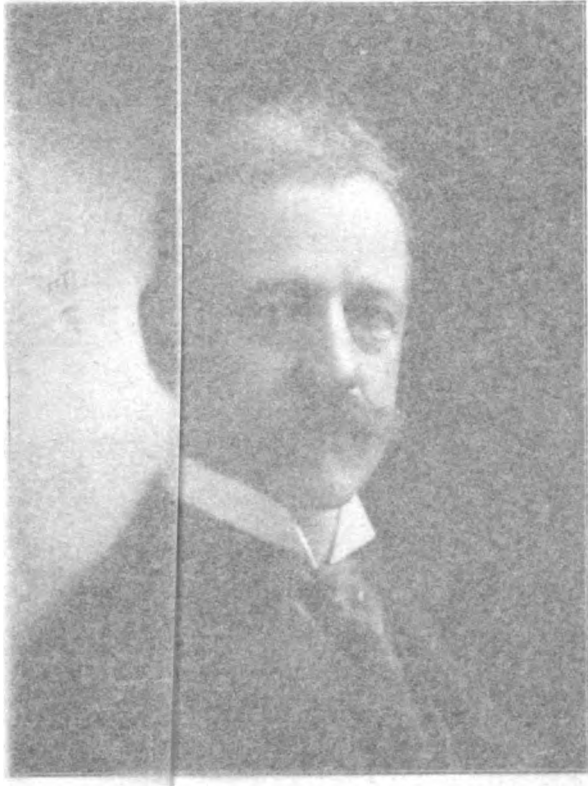

"We had been climbing the mountains of Switzerland and feasting our eyes with delight on its peerless lake and valleys. We had visited the great art galleries of Europe, and looked on the immortal works of Raphael and Michael Angelo; but we thought, for the moment, that little silk flag was the most beautiful thing we had ever seen in all our lives, and I had intense sympathy with the Boston man near us, who said, as we went out of church, that he would have given a hundred dollars if he might have stood right up there in meeting and given three cheers for the red, white and blue."

7861—LUTHER STEARNS JR. (6987), b., Apr. 13, 1829, in Ohio, son of Luther and Martha (Thomas) Stearns, of Illinois and Texas; has been carpenter, farmer, bookseller and stationer; settled in Fort Worth, Tex. He md., Jan. 8, 1867, Elizabeth Saunders, of Moulton, Ala., b., Oct. 12, 1843, who d., and the children, unmarried, "all live at home with father." An interesting account of his war experience is given by himself: "In the fall of 1848, before I was twenty years old, my father and I came to Texas. I worked a little farm until 1862, when notice was given that, on the twenty-fifth of June, there would be a regimental drill and every man would be forced to take the oath of allegiance to the Confederate States. This I would never do, so I made my property over to a widowed sister, and, the night before the drill, with eight or ten others, mounted my horse and started for Mexico. We traveled through an unsettled country, without roads, for ten or twelve days, when we reached the Rio Grande, made a raft for ourselves and let our horses swim across. The next spring I crossed the Gulf of Mexico to New Orleans, in a steamer sent by the U. S. to carry Union refugees to the States. In the fall of 1863 I joined a company of scouts made up of refugees from Texas, and known as the Texas Scouts, which was attached to the 13th Corps, U. S. Army, being paid for special duty. We were discharged in Oct., 1864. After the war, I paid a visit to my boyhood's home in Illinois, but found the climate too severe after sixteen years in the warm, southern country, so returned to Texas, where I hope to end my days." He had three children.

8608.—JUDGE OZORA F. STEARNS, b. Jan. 17, 1831, son of Asaph and Elizabeth (De Kalb), N. Y.; md., Feb. 13, 1856, Elizabeth Detroit, Mich., who was born, Feb. 13, 1833, in New York City. He was a lawyer, by profession, 1858; grad. Law Doctor, Mich. Univ., 1861; lecturer, Minn.

In Aug., 1862, during the Civil War, he served as First Lieut., Co. F, 6th Minn. Inf., 1864, was commissioner Col. 30th Regt. Minn. and served as such till Dec., 1867; 1868, partner in banking firm, 2d. Dist., Minn.; 1871, 2d. Cong. Minn.; 1872, moved to Duluth, Minn.; 1873, appointed Dist. Court Judge, 11th Dist., Minn.; 1875, Univ. Minn.

"Judge Stearns was a man of strong and conspicuous ability; was broad and liberal in his views; read much and thought deeply, and on questions submitted for his consideration held honest convictions which he allowed to follow logical conclusions. He was a hard and diligent worker, and, during a long and busy life, discharged all the duties which devolved upon him with fidelity and honesty of purpose and the right as he saw it. A true and simple man, he retained the plain and simple habits of his youth, and warmly espoused any cause which would advance the best interests of his country."

In 1895, Judge Stearns spent the winter at Pacific Beach, Cal., and returned to Duluth at the time of his death, June 10, 1895. His resting place in heart failure was the City of Angels. The body was taken to Los Angeles in accordance with his expressed wishes. The American Biographical Directory contains an excellent review of his life and biography.

Univ., 1860; settled at Rochester, Minn.

In Aug., 1862, during the Civil War, he entered military service as First Lieut., Co. F, 9th. Minn. Inf.; in April, 1864, was commissioner Col. 39th. Regt., U. S. Colored Inf., and served as such till Dec., 1865. In 1867, he was Registrar in Bankruptcy, 2d. Dist., Minn.; 1871, U. S. Senator from Minn.; 1872, moved to Duluth, Minn.; in 1874, was appointed Dist. Court Judge, 11th. Dist., Minn.; 1889, Regent Univ. Minn.

“Judge Stearns was a man of strong personality and conspicuous ability; was broad and liberal in his views, had read much and thought deeply, and on all important questions submitted for his consideration had well-grounded and honest convictions which he followed fearlessly to their logical conclusions. He was an industrious and energetic worker, and, during a long and unusually eventful life, discharged all the duties which devolved upon him with marked fidelity and honesty of purpose and in strict accordance with the right as he saw it. A true son of the people, he ever retained the plain and simple habits and sturdy patriotism of his youth, and warmly espoused every measure which would advance the best interests of the people.

“In 1895, Judge Stearns purchased a fine lemon-ranch, at Pacific Beach, Cal., and resided there with his family at the time of his death, June 2, 1896. Acute pneumonia resulting in heart-failure was the cause of his decease, and the body was taken to Los Angeles for cremation according to his expressed wishes. The American Encyclopædia of Biography contains an excellent review of the long and honorable career of Judge Stearns, who was equally able as a soldier and jurist." He had four children.

Aaron Conner, of Santa Clara, Cal., who was born May 22, 1822. We copy the following from the History of Sonoma Co., Cal.: "Among the noteworthy mercantile establishments of the city of Petaluma, that of F. R. Stearns is considered the leading house for jewelry, optical goods and kindred lines. Mr. Stearns is a practical optician and experienced manufacturing jeweler, hence commands a large trade in those directions. He received his education and learned his trade in his native state of Vermont, which he left in 1873, and conducted a successful business at Los Angeles, for two years and a half, at Santa Clara for two years, and at Petaluma ever since. Mr. Stearns is a very pleasant man, of the highest standing in every circle, and possesses one of the handsomest business-houses north of San Francisco." He has one son.

Gifford, b., Mar. 22, 1826; d., Feb. 1, 1879, at Boston Highlands. "Ziba Stearns went to Boston, in 1846, and began business as a grocer. He carried on a very extensive business, was known far and wide as a large and successful dealer, and his name was considered a synonym for honesty and business integrity. In 1865, having been uniformly successful and having accumulated a handsome fortune, he retired from the grocery business, being succeeded by his clerks. In 1867, he engaged in the brewing-business, and in this venture was unsuccessful. On account of losses in his own business and misfortunes that came by reason of his aiding others, he became involved to such an extent that he was obliged to succumb. He refused however to take advantage of any laws or technicalities by which he might lessen the receipts of his creditors and save something for himself from the general ruin, but turned over all his property, insisting upon paying, if possible, the last cent of his debts. Such examples of uprightousness in prosperity and misfortune are not common, and are worthy of mention and praise." He had one son.

"In early life he was a student at the seminary at Groton, N. Y., near Concord; in 1850 associated himself with his brother-in-law, L. N. Mum, in the general mercantile business, at New York, and dealing in everything, from a clothes-prime to gold and chemicals. In 1861, he went into the Union Army, first for the 5th Pa. Cav., and was afterwards attached to Gen. Gregg's brigade in 1867; he went to Washington and purchased the dry goods and grocery business of the firm of Bond and Van Fleet, which he conducted for more than twenty-four years. In 1885, he went into partnership, and, in 1887, they purchased a block known as the 'Stearns Block,' which was enlarged and fitted up for their extensive business; the extent may be had, when it is stated, that their removal to the present location cost them over $100,000. Their conduct in business was a fair manner and their looks are marks of liberality and generosity. In the spring of 1865, the river had been made impassable by the ice, and the family occupied the shanty that was built on the river floats of those days. It was a shanty, and one to which the family often refer." (The Stearns Album.)

"In early life he was a student at the seminary at Groton, N. Y., near Cortland; in 1850, associated himself with his brother-in-law, L. N. Muir, in the general merchantile business, at Jersey Shore, Pa., dealing in everything, from a clothes-pin to drugs and chemicals. In 1861, he went into the Union Army as sutler for the 8th. Pa. Cav., and was afterwards made sutler of Gen. Gregg's brigade; in 1865, he went to Williamsport, Pa., and purchased the dry-goods and grocery business of Richmond and Van Fleet, which he conducted most successfully for twenty-four years. In 1885, he admitted his sons to partnership, and, in 1887, they purchased a building, since known as the 'Stearns Block,' which was entirely re-modeled and fitted up for their extensive business. Some idea of its extent may be had, when it is stated, that, the first year after their removal to the present location, the business had increased over $100,000. They conduct it in a very methodical manner and their books are marvels of ingenuity and accuracy. In the spring of 1865, Mr. Stearns's family went down the river to Williamsport on a raft, because the roads had been made impassable by the great freshet of that year. All of the household goods were piled upon this raft, and the family occupied the shanty that always found a place on the river floats of those days. It was a novel experience and one to which the family often refer." He had five children.

"Dr. Stearns was educated in the schools of his native place, and after leaving the Phelps High School entered the Homeopathic Medical College, at Cleveland, O. He was very fond of his chosen profession, and, in 1850, graduated from Med. Coll. with a splendid record and highly recommended by his Professors. In the spring of 1851, he commenced practice in Freeport, Ill., and soon acquired a reputation for skill and efficiency, thus securing a large and lucrative patronage. He was elected Vice Pres. of the first Homeopathic Medical Society, of Northern Illinois, while still quite young in the profession. Besides the deep interest which Dr. Stearns took in his profession, he was quite prominent in educational matters, and was a staunch friend of our public school system. For six years, he was a member of the Freeport Board of Education and part of the time, its President. The present high standing of the Freeport Schools is largely due to his untiring energy and practical methods. He was made coroner of Stephenson Co., by the Republican party, and was called one of the best they ever had, fearless in the discharge of his duty. During 1886-7, Dr. Stearns was a member of the Stephenson Co. Pension Board, and after it passed into Democratic management, was still retained and made its Treasurer. He was quite prominent in Masonic Circles, being a member of Evergreen Lodge, F. and A. M., and of Freeport Consistory, S. P. R. S." Co. of Luzerne Co., The Evening Watchman, Luzerne Co. or Wilkesbarre, Pa., 1872; Pa. State Co. of New York, Rodman-Hig. State Co. of New York, and the New York R. R. Co.

Mr. Stearns is a member of American Society of Civil Engineers; American Society of Civil Engineers; American Club of Philadelphia, Pa.; Eastern Society of Engineers; Franklin Institute and Wyoming Historical and Archaeological Society. It would seem that this has been more a matter of family research, but, in 1877, he commenced work on the Charles branch of the Stearns family, tracing to the record of his own line. The magnitude of the task could not lead him to relinquish it, but when Ann (Stearns) Van Wageningen began her labors in 1877, he cheerfully placed at her disposal his mass, which resulted in the name and the genealogy, and proved to be of great assistance. He has given his untiring interest and hearty cooperation to his work, and we congratulate him, as well as our country, on his completion.

He md., Nov. 20, 1872, Clara, daughter of John H. Williams, 5, 1849, dau. of Hon. Lazarus Denison, of Luzerne Co. (Wadlams) Shoemaker, of Wilkesbarre, Pa.; 1875, 1876.

8795—LAZARUS DENISON STEARNS, b. Dec. 27, 1875, at Wilkesbarre, Pa.; "prepared for college at Phillips Acad., Andover, Mass.; grad., Sheffield Scientific School, Yale, 1896. He enlisted as a private, in Co. B, 1st Regt., 1st National Guard of Pa., Feb. 4, 1897, and on Oct. 1, 1897, chosen Sec. Lieut. of Co. B. In response to a call for troops in the war with Spain, he departed from Wilkesbarre with his command, Apr. 1, 1898, and was immediately chosen by the men to command the company. He was mustered into the service of the United States on Oct. 1, 1898, being the youngest officer in the First Army Corps, to which he was assigned at Camp George H. Thomas, N. C.

Capt. Stearns was by nature a peaceful man, and inclined to peaceful pursuits, the science of war being not congenial to him. He came from a line of men who were distinguished for their military capacity. His great-grandfather, Wadlams Shoemaker and Col. Nathan Denison, were both participants of the Revolution, and participated in the Wyoming Massacre, the former being killed in that awful struggle.

Mr. Stearns is a member of American Institute of Mining Engineers; American Society of Civil Engineers; Engineers' Club, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Eastern Society of Engineers; Franklin Institute and Wyoming Historical and Geological Society. It would seem that this busy man had no time for family research, but, in 1879, he commenced work on the Charles branch of the Stearns family, desiring to complete a record of his own line. The magnitude of the task compelled him to relinquish it, but, when Avis (Stearns) Van Wagenen began her labors in 1892, he generously placed at her disposal his mss., which represented much time and thought, and proved to be of great assistance. He has given his unflinching interest and hearty co-operation to this work, and, we congratulate him, as well as others, on its completion.

He md., Nov. 20, 1872, Clarinda W. Shoemaker, b., Aug. 5, 1849, dau. of Hon. Lazarus Denison and Esther (Wadhams) Shoemaker, of Wilkesbarre, Pa.; three children.

8795—LAZARUS DENISON STEARNS, b., Dec. 27, 1875, at Wilkesbarre, Pa.; "prepared for college at Phillips Acad., Andover, Mass.; grad., Sheffield Scientific School, Yale, 1896. He enlisted as a private, in Co. D, 9th. Regt., National Guard of Pa., Feb. 4, 1897, and on July 1st. was chosen Sec. Lieut. of Co. B. In response to the first call for troops in the war with Spain, Lieut. Stearns left Wilkesbarre with his command, Apr. 27, 1898. He was unanimously chosen by the men to command the company, and was mustered into the service of the United States, May 11, 1898, being the youngest officer of his grade and command in the First Army Corps, to which his regiment was assigned at Camp George H. Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga.

Capt. Stearns was by nature a soldier; although trained to peaceful pursuits, the science of tactics was instinctive with him. He came from a line of ancestry distinguished for their military capacity. His great-grandfathers, Elijah Shoemaker and Col. Nathan Denison, were soldiers of the Revolution, and participated in the Wyoming Massacre, the former being killed in that awful struggle.

Typhoid fever was prevalent in camp at Chickamauga, in Aug., 1898, when Capt. Stearns's Regt. left for Lexington, Ky., but his desire to look after his men rendered him careless of his own physical condition, and he would not yield to what he thought was a temporary indisposition. A rally was succeeded by prostration, and he was sent home on a hospital train, which reached Wilkesbarre, Aug. 30, but his death occurred at his home, Sept. 6, 1898, of typhoid fever. Death claimed many a shining mark, but none more lustrous than Capt. L. D. Stearns; the key-note of his character was forgetfulness of self and thought for others. He was a member of the Country Club, the Wyoming Historical and Geological Society, and the Pa. Society of Sons of the Revolution. It is remarkable that one so young leaves behind such a maturity of the best traits, both in social and business life. Memory stands tearful and pitying where so short a time ago radiant hope seemed to stretch forth her hands." From the collections of the Wyoming Historical and Geological Society.

"At the time of his first marriage, it was sometimes the custom to steal the bride and hold her for a ransom. While the bridal party was dancing, a rush was made for her; she was put in a sleigh and driven to Pittsfield, Mass., to a hotel, where she was found and redeemed, presumably, by treating the crowd. Although some of her captors took off their overcoats and wrapped them about her, she took a cold from which she never recovered, and died from its effects, about a year later. Prosecutions followed, but as public opinion favored the custom, the perpetrators were not punished." She left one child. His eight children were all born in Lanesboro, Mass.

(1), May 16, 1829, Cornelia Burbank, who d., Oct. 9, 1868, in Mobile, Ala.; md. (2), Nov. 20, 1873, Mrs. Lucy C. Loomis, of Pittsfield, Mass., who d., Sept. 12, 1880, in Auburn, N. C. "He was taught all the different branches of the art of manufacturing different kinds of woolen cloths, and, as his father's firm was obliged to build a machine-shop to make and repair their extensive machinery, he became a good machinist and an expert in the use of tools. In 1835, he moved to the Territory of Michigan, and, in 1836, took a trip to what is now the State of Iowa, then a part of Wisconsin Territory. By a treaty held at Rock Island, with the chiefs of the Sac and Fox Indians, this section of country was thrown open to settlement. Chicago then had two thousand inhabitants, and the greater part of Illinois was an unsettled region. The Sac and Fox Indians made annual trips from their home on the Mississippi to Canada, to receive the yearly annuity paid them by the British Government for services rendered in the war of 1812, under the celebrated Indian chief, Tecumseh. In 1821, the U. S. Government sent an expedition, under Capt. James, to explore the state of Illinois through the North-West Territory, and establish a post on the forty-ninth parallel of latitude, on the bank of the Red River of the North, showing the line separating the United States from British America. Capt. James reported to the War Department that that section could never be a self-sustaining country, and that their flour, pork, and other supplies would have to be brought from Pennsylvania and Ohio. The growth of Chicago, now the largest grain and provision market in the world, has proved the fallacy of this report. In the treaty with the Sacs and Foxes, the chiefs and all of the Indians wished to make a donation to the half-breed whites of the tribes; therefore the U. S. Government set apart for their benefit a section of country lying between the Des Moines River and the Mississippi, embracing 120,000 acres. Certain of the half-breeds wishing to sell, Mr. Stearns purchased two claims, opened a farm, and resided there until 1837, when he went to St. Louis, Mo., to look after the interests of his brothers in that city. In 1840, he went to Peoria, Ill., and was elected the second Mayor after its becoming a city. In 1847, he was employed by the U. S. Government to go into Wisconsin Territory and erect a fort on the Mississippi River, in the Indian country, one hundred twenty-five miles above Fort Snelling, to be known as Fort Ripley. While there the territory of Minnesota was organized, and, in 1849, he removed to St. Anthony, where he was in business for six years and was elected a member of the Senate of the Territorial Legislature for two years. At that time there were only six organized counties in the Territory, the remainder looking like a vast waste region. Mr. Stearns suggested that the remainder be divided into counties, which was done, and the new counties were named after the members of the Legislature. In 1856, he moved to St. Cloud, in Stearns Co., Minn., where he built a hotel, since used as a portion of the Normal School located there. The winter of 1863 and '64 was the coldest experienced during his residence in Minnesota, the mercury ranging from thirty to forty degrees below zero most of the time from Jan. 1 to 10. On the tenth of February, with his family, he left that frozen region for New Orleans, La., where he remained until 1866, when he commenced the hardware business in Mobile, Ala. In 1869, he was appointed Register of the U. S. Land Office located in Mobile, which office he held ten years, and was Pres. of the Board of Aldermen during re-construction times. In 1880, he left Mobile to reside with his son at New Orleans, La., and, at the age of eighty-six years, was still enjoying good health." The act, creating Stearns Co., Minn., was approved, Mar. 3, 1855, by Willis A. Gorman, Territorial Governor. Mr. Stearns had six children.

After graduating from the Syracuse High School, Avis Stearns taught in the public schools of Syracuse, but resigned that position to enter her father's office, and finally, take charge of his business. She is a thorough, energetic, business woman, with marked executive ability, excellent judgment and keen foresight, which placed the firm in the foremost rank of Syracuse manufacturers. In 1892, she became interested in Dr. Bond's Genealogies and Hist. of Watertown, and conceived the idea of carrying it down to date as far as the Genealogy of the Stearns family was concerned. Her plans for carrying on this work were original and successful. She adopted four children, on whom she freely lavished her affection and wealth.

Appendix.

Many records have been received which lack the data necessary to connect them with known lines. In cases where the father has md. two or three times, we find frequently that descendants of one wife have lost all trace of descendants of the other wife or wives. Sometimes, in the same family, brothers have removed to distant parts of the country, sons have left home and never been heard from, so that all knowledge of them has been lost by the home-circle. Wherever any evidence could be found, either by correspondence or searching records, placing families of unknown lineage, we have given them the space presumed to be theirs. All records which lack such evidence are given in the Appendix and, perhaps, the families themselves, having some information which we have not received, may be able to determine just where they belong. Dr. Bond, himself, with all the time and study which he expended, had sometimes to use the interrogation-point, and we, trying to follow in the paths he has marked out, feel it no discredit when obliged to do the same. Family traditions are sometimes unreliable and, in some instances, incorrect in minor particulars, but, at other times, have been of great assistance.

The disjointed parts of this record are given with the hope that those most nearly concerned can complete it.

I.

9500—JOHN STEARNS, of Barre, Mass., is given by one authority, as father of John Stearns, Esq., of Chelsea, Vt. Another correspondent says that his grandfather's name was supposed to be Nathaniel, who was father of John Stearns, Esq., of Chelsea, Vt. From the records we find that Nathaniel Stearns, of Barre, md., Sept. 18, 1788, Lucy Bullard, of Barre, Mass.

Third Record.

The following record can be traced to either one of two sources and the interested families must decide for themselves which is the correct one. Either Oliver Stearns (155-Isaac), who was of Tewksbury, and chose Joshua Abbott, his brother-in-law for his guardian, married and had several children, or, his cousin, Samuel Stearns (409-Isaac) had more sons than he is credited with, by Hazen's History of Billerica, or Bond's History of Watertown. The earliest known abiding-place of this line was in Tewksbury, Mass., and we incline to the belief that Oliver (155) was its progenitor, but have no reliable proof of the fact.

9540—BRADLEY STEARNS, date of birth unknown; moved, about 1815, from Temple, N. H., to the western part of New York State. He is said to have had three or four sons, names unknown.

9541—SAMUEL STEARNS (9545), b., July 17, 1760.

9542—OLIVER STEARNS, born in Tewksbury, Mass.

9651—It appears that Ezra Stearns was born somewhere in Mass., the name of the place being variously given as "Pittstown," "Pittsfield," and "Bayfield;" that he had a brother called "Sile," which leads one correspondent to name him "Josiel," although another gives his name as 9652—Silas. The parents of these two brothers are unknown, but some descendant may have the connecting link between them and their ancestry as traced in this work.

Ezra Stearns md. Desire Baker, and, in 1789, moved to Amsterdam, N. Y., being one of the earliest settlers in that section of the country. His children are given by one descendant as five; by another, four. The date of his death is given as Feb. 14, 1835, aged 78 yrs., which would give date of birth 1756 or 1757.

A correspondent concerning this family gives this ancestor's name as Ezra J. Stearns, while still another calls him John Stearns. His brother, Josiel or Silas Stearns, lived in Amsterdam, N. Y., in 1794, and had one dau.,

9653—SABRINA STEARNS, who was twice married, the second time to a man named Stoddard. She died, at the advanced age of one hundred and four years, at Salisbury Center, N. Y.

Both Ezra and Silas Stearns served in the Revolutionary War, where Ezra was wounded and afterwards appointed sutler at Fort Ann.

Eighth Record.

9763—COL. J. B. STEARNS was born, 1810, in Arlington, Vt.; in 1813, went with his parents to Hadley, N. Y., and, in 1816, to Ohio. He remained there until nearly sixteen years old, "when I left home in consequence of cruel treatment by my father, and have never seen him since." He began painting portraits at seventeen, and, in 1830, was student at the National Academy of Design in New York City; went through the grades of studentship; was elected Associate, and the following year, Academician; then held the office of Recording Secretary for nineteen years.

He visited Europe in 1848, painting pictures to order and studying in London and Paris. "One of my pictures was stolen from me at Cherbourg, France, which I recovered twelve years later through the police of Paris."

He md., Apr. 2, 1835, Emeline Heath, of New York City, who d., July 28, 1882. They had five children, names unknown, and three of their sons were in the Civil War.

For many years he devoted himself to historical painting alone, but, later, turned his attention to cattle and landscape. One of his finest historical pictures is, "The treaty of peace between Gen. Harrison and Tecumseh," and his celebrated series of five pictures showing Washington as a citizen, a soldier, a farmer, a man, and a Christian, has become popularized through steel and lithograph reproductions. His historical painting "The adoption of the Constitution by the Convention, Sept. 17, 1787," was painted from original portraits of the members of the Convention, and is of great interest to all students of American History.

When the war broke out, he was Lieut. Col., commanding the 12th. Regt. N. Y. S. N. G., from which his title was derived, but rheumatism compelled him to resign his place to one who could take the regiment to the field.

"His life is an illustration of the typically American career, which overcomes all obstacles and conquers success by indomitable will. After long years of patient labor on portraits and historical subjects, in which he united the conscientiousness of the antiquarian with the patriotic inspiration of the artist, he found relaxation and enjoyment in painting landscape and animal life."

Col. J. B. Stearns died in Brooklyn in 1885, from the result of a carriage accident. His grandson, 9764—WILLIAM TAYLOR STEARNS, of Brooklyn, sends the preceding sketch of his grandfather's life, which was published in The American Woman's Journal, July, 1895, and hopes it may reach the eye and heart of some relatives of his grandfather, thus making known his own ancestors.

Mr. Leander W. Stearns (10,201), sends a partial copy of a letter received by his father in 1852, which we transcribe:

"Information wanted of the Stearns family now residing in various parts of the United States and Canada. The subscriber, having come into possession of facts which warrant him in stating that a windfall of a very large amount of money has fallen to a portion of the family, _____ takes this method of gaining such information as will enable him to see justice done to all parties concerned. I have in my possession the genealogy and coat-of-arms of the family, from Edward the First, time A. D. 1272, down to the settlement of the New England States." The letter closes with the writer's address: Charles S. Stearns, 25 Ann St., New York City, care Stearns & Co.

Similar letters have been received by various members of the Stearns family and have been mentioned in their correspondence with us. We have no knowledge of the writer or of the money to which he refers.
